

Praecox in the Scientific Age

The planetary biosphere has undergone a severe praecox shock. Which means that much of the global consciousness began to recover from severe collective psychosis (a cause of the declining religious state). Instead there has been a breakdown in its thought processes -- such that, the thought processes of the planet have not only become both more graphic and intense, but also manic and permanent. An aftershock that has led to world-wide erratic behavior and violent tendencies.

For those reasons the planetary biosphere can no longer maintain, “equilibrium” in its natural behavior rather its symptomatic of anti-social and pathological tendencies that has incited hate and fringe groups. Causing the political process, especially the global consciousness, to become more unstable. If that’s the case, then the Scientific Age becomes not only volatile but also violently anti-social.
