

Abstract

With the current explanation of black holes, the laws of physics breaks down. Scientists still do not understand "what fires the particles at such high speed into the poles." The particles in the rings of Saturn violate the laws of inertia and motion because they cannot stop and return to their precise previous position when they are pushed out of place. Scientists cannot explain how a 27 million degree internal thermonuclear furnace can heat the corona to millions of degrees and leave a relatively cool 8,000 degree surface of the Sun between these two tremendous temperatures. It is impossible for photons of light to travel millions of miles through the blackness of outer space and become visible when it encounters the atmosphere of moons and planets.

Solution of Mysteries of the Universe

I applied for a copyrighted of my concept titled "Electromagnetic Field Energy: The Key to Solution of Scientific Mysteries of the Universe." on May 6, 1978 and received confirmation of the copyright on May 25, 1978. I have added more to the concept since then.

My concept is based on the laboratory experiment in the early 1900's that proved when an electrical current flows through a wire it produces a swirling magnetic field around the wire, always clockwise, that produces an eerie glow around the wire. And if you hold a compass over the wire the compass needle will indicate in which direction the swirling magnetic field flows. Also, if you hold a 3 foot long iron pipe perpendicular to the Earth with the top end tilted slightly toward the North, the Earth's magnetic field will align the polarity of all of the molecules in the pipe in one direction producing a magnet with the same magnetic field we use to generate electricity. And the utility company spins one magnetic field through another magnetic field at high speed to generate the electricity with which we produce all of the marvels we live with every day, including blinding laser light and thousands of degrees of heat in electrical induction furnaces. These facts proved that there was a correlation between Magnetic field energy and electricity that was finally acknowledged on the Aug. 12, 2010 "History" program titled "Magnetic Storm". It stated: First: Electricity and magnetism are one and the same thing. Second: All solar activity is basically magnetic activity. And Third: Magnetic storms are some of the most powerful storms in our solar system and have been nearly completely overlooked by scientists. And forth: Solar magnetism; Why is it so deadly and so misunderstood."

With this proven fact it indicated that the jet stream wind was produced by the Northward flowing magnetic field lines of force that produced the swirling magnetic field around it that carries molecules of air with its flow that produces the jet stream wind that flows up to 300 mph faster than the Eastward spin of the Earth's surface. Then, the jet stream magnetic field current flow produces a swirling magnetic loop around it that in turn produces the swirling clockwise winds around the high pressure areas and the counterclockwise winds around the low pressure areas. The downward flow of the swirling winds around the jet stream adds to the pull of gravity on molecules of air creating the high pressure and the upward flow of the swirling magnetic field around the jet stream partially negates the pull of gravity on molecules of air, producing the low pressure. The magnetic loop I depicted in the illustration I included in my copyright was video taped on the Sun by the NASA SOHO satellite on Feb. 28, 2001 and reported on the program titled "Space Science Update: Solar Max."

With this knowledge, it can be understood that the much more powerful magnetic field of Saturn will produce a much greater swirling jet stream type of wind that pulls molecules of air with its flow that produces the glowing rings of Saturn that orbits around Saturn at a speed of 20,000 to 40,000 mph with very precise separations between the swirling molecules of air. The fact that the moon Pan actually spreads the gap in which it orbits wider instead of "shepherding" the particles into the precise width of the gap and then the gap instantly returns to its precise configuration proves that the rings do not consist of solid particles but of glowing atoms of molecules of gas. It is absolutely impossible for solid particles to return to the precise configuration of the gap but it is natural for magnetic field lines of force to regain its precise configuration after it has been disturbed by another magnetic field of like polarity. The fact that the Pioneer 1 spacecraft was reported to have detected a huge cloud of hydrogen and helium as it approached the rings in 1980 proves that there are glowing atoms of gases around Saturn, not solid particles of ice or dust.

I have devised a pragmatic demonstration of rubbing an ordinary plastic store bag briskly with your bare hand that produces a charge of static electricity in both the bag and your hand. Then, if you move the bag or your hand next to an unplugged fluorescent tube in a dark room there is a magnetic field surrounding the static electricity charge that will stimulate the atoms of invisible gases in the vacuum tube to a very clearly glowing state of excitement. If the very weak charge of static electricity and magnetic field that you cannot feel or otherwise notice in the flesh and bones of your hand stimulates atoms of gases to a glowing state of excitement, the very powerful magnetic field of Saturn is certainly capable of creating the glowing atoms of gases in the rings of Saturn.

A recent video of the rings of Saturn revealed an object that flew at a high rate of speed right through the rings of Saturn that spread millions of the "particles" around the object and then the particles instantly returned to their precise previous position after the object moved away. It is absolutely impossible for particles traveling at 20,000 to 40,000 mph in open space to stop their outward momentum and instantly return to their original position to continue the perfectly uniform configuration for millions of years. Only a magnetic field current flow that has been repelled by another magnetic field of like polarity encroaching into its sphere of influence will return to its original configuration after the encroaching magnetic field moves away.

A comet approaching the Sun meets the resistance of the long wavelengths of magnetic field current radiated from the Sun and generates a charge of static electricity in its nucleus. Then, as the demonstration I devised proves, the static electricity charge produces a magnetic field surrounding the nucleus that stimulates the atoms of gases around it to a glowing state of excitement. Then, the long wavelengths of magnetic field that is radiated from the Sun increases in intensity to short wavelengths by the attraction of positive to negative forces as it passes through the abnormally intense magnetic field around the nucleus so that it, also, becomes abnormally intense via the natural electrical induction process that it stimulates the atoms of gases beyond the nucleus to a glowing state of excitement to create the 100 million mile long tail that always points away from the Sun like the spoke of a wheel.

It is absolutely impossible for the heat of the Sun to sublimate gases and dust from a comet when it is still 600 million miles from the Sun. The Lovejoy Comet came only 8,000 miles from the Sun and survived the 1 million centigrade heat. Ice crystals have been detected by NASA spacecraft on the planet Mercury. And we have snow capped mountains all year on Earth only 90 million miles from the Sun. So it is absolutely impossible for the heat of the Sun to cause both Halley's Comet and Comet Holmes to "erupt into a shiny cloud of ice and dust hundreds of times brighter than it should" 1.3 billion miles from the Sun. Both comets encountered the much more intense magnetic field of the galaxy when it reached 1.3 billion miles from the Sun.

The auroras are caused by the convergence of two magnetic field loops in the magnetic field of the Sun that produces an electrical short circuit resulting in radiating thousands of kilowatts of long wavelengths of electromagnetic energy that enters the Earth's and other planet's magnetic field that adds to the concentration of all of the magnetic field current flows as they become concentrated entering the poles increasing their intensity sufficiently enough to stimulate the atoms of gases in the near vacuum of their upper atmosphere to a glowing state of excitement by the attraction of negative to positive polarity converting the long wavelengths to the short wavelengths of visible light. It is not ionized particles slamming into other ionized particles. It is simply the combined long waves of electromagnetic energy increasing into the short wavelengths of visible light that causes the fascinating "dancing lights" of the auroras..

The "geysers" of Enceladus is caused by the powerful magnetic field of Saturn combined with the abnormal intensity of the magnetic field current flow from the entire circumference of Enceladus as they become concentrated as they enter the South Pole combined with the magnetic field current flow from the Sun and the electrical connection between Saturn and Enceladus that was discovered by the Cassini spacecraft on April 20, 2011.

The Great Red Spot of Jupiter is not due to an atmospheric storm but the swirling magnetic field of a huge comet that impacted on the surface of Jupiter. It is the resistance of the swirling magnetic field of the impacted comet with the powerful magnetic field of Jupiter that creates the glowing red spot.

The "volcanoes" of Io are created by either a concentration of conducting minerals or the magnetic fields of impacted comets on its surface combined with the powerful magnetic field of Jupiter that stimulates the gases in the atmosphere of Io to a glowing state of excitement.

The Sun does not have an internal thermonuclear furnace. Its brilliant light and extreme heat is created by the resistance of the many magnetic fields in its immense magnetic field to the encroachment of the other magnetic fields in its sphere of influence. It is this heat generated in its magnetic field that produces the extreme heat of the corona. It is absolutely impossible for an internal thermonuclear furnace to radiate the millions of degrees heat to the corona and leave the relatively cool 8,000 degree heat of the surface of the Sun between these two awesome temperatures of 27 million degrees in the core and millions of degrees in its corona.

It is not an internal thermonuclear furnace that produces the photons of light that reportedly takes thousands of years to reach the surface and create the blinding light, then travels through the blackness of space hundreds of millions of miles unseen and then suddenly becomes visible light again when it reaches distant planets. Instead, the Sun radiates magnetic field energy at long wavelengths slightly below the intensity to produce visible light. Then, whenever and wherever the radiated magnetic field encounters another magnetic field, the combined magnetic field energy becomes short wave energy intense enough to stimulate the atoms of gases in the near vacuum of the planets to a glowing, visible state of excitement.

The Sun does not radiate heat to the planets. The thermos bottle that has only a ¼ inch vacuum space between the two walls of the bottle proves that it is impossible for heat per se to be transferred through a vacuum and outer space is a near perfect vacuum. Again, the Sun radiates the relatively weak long wavelengths of magnetic field energy that generates heat via the resistance of the magnetic fields of like polarity of the planets it encounters along with the visible light. The intensity of the magnetic field of the planets, the content of its atmosphere and the content of the minerals determines the temperature of the heat it will generate.

A black hole is not produced by the preposterous explanation of gravity from a collapsed star thousands of times larger than our Sun. The swirling magnetic field of a galaxy is equivalent to the swirling magnetic field of an automotive solenoid coil or an ignition coil. Both of these coils use a weak 12 volt current to produce a powerful high voltage current through its hollow core. Similarly, the combined swirling magnetic fields of all of the planets of a galaxy produces a powerful beam of light emanating from its core at the speed of light millions of miles long.

The designation of "gravity lensing" is a misnomer. A beam of light is basically a flow of magnetic field energy that is not affected by gravity. It is the intervening magnetic field that repels the magnetic field of the beam of light around it. So, instead of gravity lensing it is actually magnetic field lensing.

The universe did not begin with a big bang. It began with static electricity ionizing atoms of inert gases with a positive and negative polarity. It is the attraction of positive polarity to negative polarity that caused the mutation of the ionized gases into the solid masses of moons, planets and stars of the universe. The conventional big bang belief does not explain where the mass came from that exploded in the big bang.

Many other glows like moon pigeons, space worms, glows on the surface of the moon, etc. are the result of the combination of two or more magnetic field currents of opposite polarity or the resistance of two magnetic fields of like polarity.

Thus we have the long and the short of a consistent development of the universe from particle physics to the largest mass in the universe with everything between them without any contradictions.
